5-Board Bench The construction could not be simpler, which makes this the perfect project for someone looking to build their woodworking skills and cut their teeth on a surefire success. Expect to spend no more than an afternoon putting this project together.

Picnic Table The traditional material for this type of table is redwood, which will resist rot and the elements quite naturally. You can also go with cedar, which has the same properties and looks just as nice as redwood.

Sheltered Swing Set aside a full weekend for building this project. Although the techniques we've used are meant to simplify things for the home craftsman, the project is still fairly involved.

Outdoor Serving Cart This cart is built with exterior-rated materials. The fasteners and hardware are all corrosion-resistant. It features cedar for the framing and the drawer front, but you could easily substitute any exterior-grade lumber.
